Art Unit: 1725

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-7 and 23-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Steininger et al. for the same reasons as set forth in the last office action.

Namely, Steininger et al. substantially show the invention as claimed (see figure 2, the combination of body 15 and fitting 37 is considered to be an adapter) except that they do not disclose whether the adapter is made of beryllium copper. However, in col. 4, line 14+ of the patent, it discloses that the cup shape piston head is preferably made of beryllium copper alloy. It would have been obvious to make every parts of the piston with same material (i.e. beryllium copper) such that they all have the same thermal expansion coefficient and thereby to obtain a better joint between parts during the casting cycle. Also, it would have been obvious to made the adapter with beryllium copper alloy in view of its combination properties of excellent thermal conductivity and the mechanical strength.

3. Applicant's arguments filed October 30, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

- a. In page 6 of the amendment applicant stated that the adapter of Steininger et al. would encounter significant forces and pressures that would lead one to make the adapter out of a material such as forged steel. However, the cup-shaped head 71, which preferably formed of a beryllium-copper alloy, also would encounter the same forces and pressures as that encounter by the body 15 and the fitting 37. Thus, it would have been obvious to make the body 15 and the fitting 37 from the same material as the cup-shaped head 71 such that they all have the same thermal expansion coefficient and thereby to obtain a better joint between parts during the casting cycle. Also, it would have been obvious to made the adapter with beryllium copper alloy in view of its combination properties of excellent thermal conductivity and the mechanical strength.

b. In page 7 of the amendment applicant further stated that in figure 2 of Steininger et al. the adapter is not configured to maintain the plunger tip and the plunger rod in fixed relationship to one another and to the adapter. However, the claims are directed to "an adapter". The plunger tip and the plunger rod are extraneous to the "adapter". Thus, the inclusion of the plunger tip and the plunger rod does not further limit the structure of "adapter" as claimed. Further, in Steininger et al. the adapter does maintain the plunger tip and the plunger rod in fixed relationship to one another and to the adapter once those elements are assembled.

4. All claims are drawn to the same invention claimed in the application prior to the entry of the submission under 37 CFR 1.114 and could have been finally rejected on the grounds and art of record in the next Office action if they had been entered in the application prior to entry under 37 CFR 1.114. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL even though it is a first action after the filing of a request for continued examination and the submission under 37 CFR 1.114. See MPEP § 706.07(b).

Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
